Site Selection Magazine uses LocationSelector.com to Develop Global Best to Invest Rankings

Newton, MA and Amsterdam, The Netherlands, 22 May, 2013

The May issue of Site Selection Magazine contains its 2013 Global Best to Invest Rankings, showcasing countries and regions around the world who have positioned themselves as competitive locations to draw in new business. The rankings - which are performed annually - utilized ICA's LocationSelector.com platform, powered by data of the Economist Intelligence Unit (EIU), for the second time to augment the magazine's ranking efforts. The national Investment Promotion Agencies and metro areas recognized by the magazine were particularly successful in 2012 at attracting capital investment projects – both expansions of existing facilities and new projects – from investors at home and abroad.

While data on actual projects is more readily available, Site Selection used LocationSelector.com to provide a location rank and competitiveness score for business costs, economic strength, infrastructure; regulatory burden; and tax rates.

LocationSelector.com provides users with a powerful and user-friendly way to evaluate countries, regions and cities across the globe using a robust database of critical location factors powered by the EIU. This is then coupled with weighting, ranking and cost-benefit tools developed through ICA's decades of experience with developing location solutions for our clients.

Chris Steele, ICA's COO and North America President, comments: "We have a long-standing and rewarding relationship with Site Selection Magazine, and we are gratified to see our tools being used to inform the location selection industry in this way. Site Selection is the absolute thought leader in location trends, and this ranking shows how LocationSelector.com is changing how location data is being used on a regular basis."
